INSIGHTS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

INSIGHT SUMMARY

- Revenue showed an overall upward trend over the six-month period, with June recording the strongest performance.
 - Coffee was consistently the highest revenue-generating product, while packaged chocolate remained the lowest-performing product across all analyses.
- Morning trading generated the highest revenue, with evenings consistently recording the lowest sales.
- Weekly sales peaked on Mondays, while weekends, particularly Saturdays and Sundays, experienced lower revenue.
 - Store locations performed differently across the week, but all showed improved revenue during the winter month of June

RECOMMENDATIONS

- Increase promotions and marketing for packaged chocolate, flavors, and loose tea to improve sales.
 - Introduce evening specials or discounts to increase customer traffic during low-performing hours.
 - Run weekend promotions, especially on Saturdays and Sundays, to boost revenue.
 - Replicate the successful sales strategies used for coffee across other product categories.
- Ensure popular products, particularly coffee, remain well stocked to avoid stock shortages.
- Analyze June's successful performance and implement similar seasonal campaigns throughout the year.
 - Tailor promotions to each store location based on its strongest and weakest trading days.
 - Continue monitoring sales trends regularly to identify opportunities and respond quickly to changes in customer demand
